

Dear members of the academic community (teachers and students of the Faculty of Agrobiology, Food and Natural Resources),

In accordance with the current regulations on the abolition of contact teaching, I hereby state that, until this regulation is revoked, the following applies to all forms of Bachelor and Master study:

- the lectures and seminars are transferred to the LMS Moodle environment, teachers must provide study materials for the lessons (lectures, tutorials, on-line texts, tasks, tests, links, etc.)
- students are asked to provide feedback at the beginning of next week in the absence of materials and guidelines for teaching in Moodle environment via this questionnaire <https://forms.gle/UzWkZk3kng5hA4q3A>
- communication with teachers will be done electronically (e-mail, chat within a specific subject in Moodle, or other agreed non-contact way)
- due to the situation, the conditions for obtaining credit for a specific subjects may change - please follow the individual subjects in Moodle
- setting the conditions, including the adaptation of teaching methods, is fully the responsibility of the supervisor of the particular subject
- the deadline for submission of Diploma theses was extended to 17 April 2020
- deadline for submission of Bachelor theses was extended to 24 April 2020

At present, restrictive measures do not allow us to test students in contact form, we assume that a sufficient number of exam dates will be announced in the standard manner during the exam period.

In this extraordinary situation, I assume maximum friendliness of all parties involved in the education of summer semester.

Once the measures have been withdrawn, we will endeavor to complete contact lectures and seminars to the extent possible.

In case of further changes or measures, we will inform you immediately, please follow your school e-mail, faculty website and especially individual subjects in Moodle.

Regards

Iva Langrová
Faculty Dean
